REPEATER USE

For those new to repeaters, whether you are a new amateur or just moved up from the HF bands, here are a few notes on the proper and courteous use of repeaters. VE2CRA, the repeater owned by the Ottawa Amateur Radio Club will be used as an example.

The repeater is a SHARED facility which is open to anyone, with over a hundred users, and thus you shouldn't monopolize it. One of the purposes of a repeater is to extend the range of mobiles with their low power and relatively poor antennas. Base stations talking to other base stations thus should use direct channels for extended conversations, if possible. It is not necessary to keep the repeater busy all the time; if you can't think of anything else to say to the other station, say '73'. Endless chatter about nothing in particular is annoying to those listening. Morning and evening rush hours can be quite busy, and thus are poor times for rag chewing, although if you leave pauses and invite others to join you, interesting round tables can result.

VE2CRA has a 3 minute timer on the transmitter; if the transmitter is on for more than 3 minutes, it will turn off for about 30 seconds. The timer is reset by the transmitter being allowed to turn off, unlike some other repeaters that reset when the receiver input signal drops out. Thus you must leave a brief pause, between transmissions to reset the timer.

FM repeater operation is quite different from HF phone; you don't call 'CQ'--just announce your presence by giving your call, e.g. "Anyone around? VE3XZY", or "VE3XYZ listening". You do not need to identify every time you turn it over to the other station; you are only required by law to identify at the start and end of a conversation, and at 30 minute intervals during it. Voices are easily identified on FM, so even in a round table the other fellows will know who is talking. To turn it over to the other station, it is merely necessary to let up on the mike button -- the "clunk" from his receiver as the repeater transmitter turns off lets the other guy know it is his turn; it is just as effective as the word "over". Plain language is adequate; there is no need for Q-signals or 10 codes on FM, particularly as they are frequently used incorrectly. Nor is it necessary to use phonetics, except perhaps when the other operator requests you to give your call again as he can't tell whether a letter was a "b" or a "d". Victor Echo Three Xray Yankee Zulu" sounds ridiculous when a signal is of good quality.

Leave a pause before you go back to the other guy to let someone break in to use the repeater. Remember, it is a shared facility, not your own personal channel. It is customary to use the word "BREAK" to interrupt a conversation, to use the repeater to call someone else, or to ask for assistance. If you wish to join a conversation, just give your call in the pause left by the others. ALWAYS turn the repeater over IMMEDIATELY to a BREAKing station, and ALWAYS acknowledge a station that breaks in, no matter what technique he uses.

Regarding the use of the repeater for telephone traffic, either via an auto-patch or by someone making a call for you, remember that only traffic of a personal nature is legal on amateur radio. Transacting business on the repeater is risking your licence as well as that of the repeater and the guy making the call. If in doubt, don't pass the traffic!

Keep your equipment in good operation condition. There is no excuse for putting a bad sounding signal on the air - hum, vibrator or transistor power supply whine, over or under deviating, off frequency signals should be fixed as soon as they are brought to your attention, or else the rig taken off the air until they are. You are annoying dozens of people when you operate with a faulty rig. And when testing, use a dummy load and a frequency that is not a repeater input. Most dummy loads let some RF out, and it does not take much to trigger the repeater.

If you only have the one frequency, you can sometimes adjust the crystal trimmer to move the signal out of the passband of the receiver. If you are testing on the repeater input, make sure you are listening to the repeater output so that you can tell if you are interfering with the repeater. If you are, STOP. Again, you will be annoying dozens of people. When testing, use your call. It is illegal to put a signal on the air without identifying.

Handling emergency traffic, for example a car accident report, on the repeater requires some consideration. If you have auto-patch facilities, when you make the call, slowly tell the police, for example, who you are (e.g. an amateur radio operator at the scene), what has happened, where it happened, and how serious it is (e.g. any injuries). If you don't have auto-patch facilities, just ask on the repeater if there is someone around who can, for example, call the Ottawa Police. After finding someone, slowly give him the details above to pass on. Then wait on the repeater until the person returns to inform you the call has been made; there may be additional information needed. The person actually making the call should make sure he has all the information before calling; if it is a serious incident, he might leave his phone number with the police in case they want to get more information later.

Occasionally one hears what is obviously a non-amateur on a repeater, perhaps using a stolen rig, or someone causing deliberate interference. The best course of action is to ignore him; do not acknowledge his existence at any time; even later on when you figure he is not around. Report such things to the repeater operators by telephone. These intruders get their kicks by bothering people; if they don't get any reaction from the people they think they are bothering, they will quit.

In summary, remember that the repeater is a shared facility, and that courtesy and common sense will make you popular with the other users. "DO UNTO OTHERS...." is still the golden rule.

DELHI SELF-SUPPORTING DMXHD, DMXMD CONCRETE-BASE TOWERS

Medium Duty and Heavy Duty Ham Towers

Sections

DELHI DMXMD and DMXHD towers use the larger and stronger sections of the 68 foot, eight section, Model DMX-68 TV Tower. DMXMD towers have a DMX2T top section, DMXHD towers have a DMX3T top section. Both top sections have heavy duty rotator plates and a No. 244A cast aluminum mast clamp installed on the top plate.

Each section is 8 ft. long and has beaded channel legs riveted together with "X" braces. Legs and braces are all steel, heavily galvanized before fabrication. Rivets are solid heat treated aluminum. Sections fit accurately together and are joined by heat treated nuts and bolts. The uniform tapered leg design together with evenly spaced "X" braces give the tower greater strength and reliability.

ANTENNA LOAD LIMITS

DMXMD Medium Duty Towers are designed to support an antenna load up to 6 square feet wind area. This is equivalent to two large TV/FM antennas or one large CB beam or one small amateur beam or one large VHF collinear.

DMXHD Heavy Duty Towers are designed to support an antenna load up to 9 square feet wind area. This is equivalent to a very large CB beam or CB stacked array or a large amateur beam.

Guy wires must be used if larger loads are required or cross mounted antennas, or if greater height using straight sections is needed.
